This summer the Department of Modern Languages of Seton Hall University is offering a total immersion program of 6 credits of French language and culture in Paris, including three credits at the Sorbonne, France’s oldest and most prestigious university. The program provides a unique opportunity for a short-term intensive study of French language and culture, while offering students the opportunity to visit some of Europe’s most famous cultural centers and historic monuments, including the Louvre, the Musée d’Orsay (impressionist paintings), Notre Dame, the Sacré Coeur, Montparnasse, the Eiffel Tower, and, only a short trip from Paris, the palace and gardens of Versailles and Monet’s lily pond and gardens at Giverny. Brittany, Normandy, Provence and the French Riviera are all within reach via weekend excursions. Classes will meet every day (Monday through Friday) and will be taught by Dr. Anne Mullen-Hohl, from Seton Hall University, and by distinguished faculty members from the Sorbonne. Students will live in student residences at the Cité Universitaire (strategically located on one of the Paris metro’s main lines) and eat at its dining hall and café. All students will take public transportation to their classes at the Sorbonne and excursions in Paris.

This program is designed for students at all levels of French: Elementary, Intermediate and Advanced.

Estimated cost of the program: $5,050. Fees payable in euros are based upon an exchange rate of .78 euros for $1.00 as of January 22, 2004 and may vary at the time of departure. This figure includes round-trip air fare, student housing and meals at the Cité Universitaire, tuition and fees (Seton Hall and the Sorbonne), a monthly pass on the Paris metro and admission to Paris museums included in the program, but does not include textbooks, insurance, personal expenses, incidental meals away from campus, and the cost of transportation, meals and fees for excursions outside of Paris. Students will fly to Paris as a group, departing from Newark International Airport.
